

AMENDED MEASURES PASSED THE SENATE

WOOL SCHEDULE HANGED AND ALTERED FROM THE HOUSE BILL IS PUT TO FINAL VOTE TODAY.

INSURGENTS WON DAY

After Senate Had Beaten Underwood Bill They Managed To Bring About A Reconsideration Which Carried.

Washington, D. C., July 27.—The wool measure, not the Underwood bill, but an amended bill, containing some of the Underwood features and others of the radical insurgent leaders passed the Senate this afternoon after strenuous time. Whether the House will accept it in its amended form or whether Taft would sign it remains to be seen.

La Follette's Amendment.—Offering amendments proposing reductions on the duties of woolen goods La Follette took the position a reduction, that if adopted they would compensate the farmers, at least in part for losses they would suffer as a result of free trade in agricultural products with Canada.

"They will," the speaker continued, "in some measure relieve all the people of the United States who have been made to pay tribute to the woolen trust, long the pampered favorite of the tariff law."

La Follette startled the Senate when he declared he had heard there "would be a little performance today to defeat all real tariff legislation," that a number of high protection republicans had agreed to vote for the house wool bill, sure it's excessively low duties would justify a veto by the President.

Except for Brown of Nebraska, who voted in the affirmative, the vote on the wool bill along strict party lines, La Follette, whose amendment was defeated, 14 to 66, secured a reconsideration of the original Underwood bill by a vote of 49 to 31. The democrats and insurgents supporting the motion.

La Follette then offered a modified substitute of his defeated amendment as compromise between the house bill and the original La Follette bill, upon which the democrats and insurgents had agreed.

La Follette's compromise wool bill then passed the senate 48 to 32.

Big Reduction.—The La Follette measure reduces the raw wool duty to thirty-five per cent ad valorem, and correspondingly reduces the duties on woolen articles.

Identifies Check.—H. D. Holshaw, a son of former State Senator Holshaw of Illinois, testified before the Lorimer committee today.

The witness identified a deposit slip which he said was his father's handwriting, showing a deposit of $2,500 in the Holshaw bank shortly after the Lorimer election.

Bailey Resigns.—Because he does not believe in the senate's method of taking testimony in investigations, Senator Bailey of Texas resigned from the committee on privileges and elections.

Stephenson Matter.—To his friends Bailey said he could not consent to enter upon work which required an investigation of the charges against Senator Stephenson. "The senate admits all kinds of matter," said Bailey, "and I cannot see my way clear to decide a case of such magnitude on such a basis."

Brands Tale False.—A cablegram from Charles P. Taft, in which he branded as false any intimation he was interested in Alaskan affairs, was made public by the President today.

Money Trusts.—An investigation of the "money trust" was today authorized by the house rules committee which reported favorably on the resolution of Rep. Lindbergh, republican of Minnesota, to that end.

Farmers' Free Bill.—The democratic farmers' free list bill was made the unfinished business in the senate today. A final vote on the measure will be taken on Tuesday.

HOT FIGHT ON FOR SENATORIAL TOGA

Senator Percy and Ex-Governor Vardaman Enters On Last Stages Of Campaign For Percy's Seat In Congress

Jackson, Miss., July 27.—One of the most spirited political campaigns that Mississippi has seen in years entered upon its final stage today. Next Tuesday a State-wide Democratic primary will be held for the endorsement of a candidate for United States senator and the nomination of candidates for governor and other state officers to be chosen at the next election. In this State the Democratic nomination is equivalent to election. Public interest centers almost wholly in the contest for the senatorship. Senator Leroy Percy, whose term will expire in 1913, is a candidate for reelection. His principal opponent in the fight for the toga is ex-Governor James K. Vardaman, one of the most aggressive and picturesque politicians that Mississippi has turned out in many years.

C. H. Alexander is the third entrant in the senatorial race. Alexander has developed a considerable following, but most unbiased onlookers are of the opinion that the real fight will be between Vardaman and Percy, with a close finish and the probability that a second primary will be necessary to a choice. Earl Brower, a prominent lawyer of Clarksdale, will be nominated for governor without opposition.

LAWS OF ANCIENT CITY DISCOVERED

Original of Rules of Hygiene Issued By Court of Ravenna.

"We decree and order that, from June 1 until October 1, none shall allow his pigs to stray in the public squares or inhabited streets of Ravenna under penalty of a fine of three sou.

"Pigs shall not be allowed to wander in the churches or in the cemeteries.

"In order that the streets of Ravenna may always be clean and the health of the town good, every householder is obliged to bring the refuse in his house to the front door on every Friday morning and leave it there. The street cleaners will then collect it and take it to a lonely spot."

EFFECTIVE BUSINESS WANTS

The opportunities of the want columns are oftentimes worthy of careful consideration.

Many business men call upon the Wants to aid them in the solution of business problems. The Wants are most effective in locating just the kind of workers that are most needed and they often put business men in touch with investors who are glad of the opportunity of securing a part interest in an established business.

The Wants, too, are the medium through which businesses are bought and sold. They locate selling agents, aid in the opening up of new territory, in the distributing of manufactured products and locate competent representatives in various localities.

The Wants play a most important part in modern business.

Many business men have found the Wants of inestimable value in meeting business emergencies that arise from time to time.

"MONEY TRUST" WAS FORMED AS RESULT OF THE DECISIONS

Minnesota Representative Says National City Company Was Organized To Offset Rulings of Supreme Court.

Washington, D. C., July 27.—That the Supreme court decisions in the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases made necessary the formation of the $10,000,000 National City Company in the belief of the moneyed interests in the opinion of Representative Lindbergh, rep. Minn., who is now urging action by the house for the investigation of the "money trust." The $10,000,000 company formed in New York is claimed by many to be in reality a clever scheme on the part of the trust officials to be used as a holding company for the convoluted trusts which they dissolve. Representative Lindbergh has written the following statement for the United Press:

In 1907, it was inevitable that the defects of our financial system should have been put into practical operation by the Morgan and Rockefeller interests. I would not say that they bought on the panic, but it was known by them that the panic was in store and could be brought on any time. Since then there has been a constant concentration of the great financial institutions under one control. Back of this are the industrial organizations, Standard Oil, steel and railroads.

With the decisions of the Supreme Court in the Standard Oil and Tobacco trust cases, it becomes necessary to reexamine matters to some extent, and believe the formation of the $10,000,000 corporation by the National City Bank was partly due to this necessity. It was this fact, in addition to certain meetings of financiers in Europe that induced me to introduce my resolution for an investigation of the situation.

COL. JOHN M'ELROY WOULD HEAD G. A. R.

Washington Man Has Forces Lined Up For Election As Commander In Chief At Encampment Next Month.

Washington, D. C., July 27.—Colonel John M'Elroy, editor and publisher of The National Tribune of this city, confidently expects to be elected to the office of commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic at the national encampment in Rochester next month.

Colonel M'Elroy was a candidate for the honor at the national encampment at Atlantic City last year, but was defeated by John E. Gilman of Boston. At that time charges were made against Colonel M'Elroy of having used undue influence to secure election. These charges were found to be without foundation and Colonel M'Elroy is said to be in receipt of assurances from State Departments and local posts throughout the country which indicate that there will be practically no opposition to his candidacy at the Rochester Encampment.

DIVERSE OPINIONS WHEN RECIPROCITY LAW IS EFFECTIVE

Authorities at Washington Are Divided Regarding Exact Time That Law Will Go Into Effect.

Washington, D. C., July 27.—Just when the Canadian reciprocity agreement will become operative, now that it has been finally ratified into law by Congress and President Taft, was a question upon which there was a division of opinion among authorities here today.

Contains Two Sections.—As agreed to, the measure contains two sections. The first sets forth the full dutiable and free list articles to be sent under the terms of the bill from this country to Canada, and the dutiable and free lists of articles sent from the Dominion to the United States.

The second section provides for free entry into the United States, from Canadian provinces that do not enforce any export tax or other restrictions, an shipments to the United States, of wood pulp, newspaper and other paper and paper board manufactured wholly of wood pulp and valued at not more than four cents a pound.

Smart on Bill.—Senator Reed Smoot (Rep., Utah), one of the highest authorities on the tariff in the Senate, today asserted that the first section of the bill could not take effect until it had been passed by the Canadian Parliament. "As to section 2," he said, "there is a strong opinion among senators that it will take effect on the passage of the bill by Congress, even if Canada, at that time, has taken no action on the reciprocity measure."

Notice to President.—In the first section of the agreement is a provision setting forth that the dutiable and free lists of articles from Canada "shall take effect when over the President of the United States shall have satisfactory evidence and shall make proclamation" that the dutiable and free lists of the United States goods sent to Canada are recognized by the Dominion.

Section two, of the United States bill, is a plain statute that requires no action by the President to carry it into effect.

Cummins' Opinion.—The opinion of Senator Cummins (Rep., Iowa), was thus expressed: "The difficulty about the present arrangement is as the Senator from Minnesota has said. For some reason or other, the House has segregated section two from the remainder of the bill, and it is doubtful whether it will be controlled by the provision and the conditions of the previous part of the bill. If it is not so controlled, then it is not reciprocal, and we would be in danger of the favored-nation clause."

An Apparent Defect.—An apparent defect in the United States bill was pointed out by some Senators. If Canada should, some day, repeal the Canadian bill, the United States law would remain in force until Congress could take action.

It was several times suggested that the bill be amended so that it would be automatically repealed in the event of the repeal of the Canadian law by the Ottawa parliament, but the general belief was that the conditions under which it might operate to the disadvantage of the United States were beyond the range of possibility.

The Message.—"The President's defense of his course in the Controller Day affair shows how hard it is to make a good excuse for a bad mistake." This was the opinion expressed today by Clifford Pinchot, ex-forester and late adversary in the controversy with ex-Secretary Ballinger on Taft's explanation of the alleged "grab" of the key to Alaska's transportation contained in a special message to the senate yesterday.

Not Satisfied.—He asserted that the explanation did not explain. "It leaves the matter wholly untouched," he said. "In spite of all explanations, the fact remains that Mr. Taft, in opening the lands around Controller Day, without notice to the public, has given the interests behind it an opportunity to acquire the key to the channel of Controller Day before the public knew what was going on."

NEGRO TAKES DEATH SENTENCE CALMLY

John H. Prather, Who Is to Be Hanged Tomorrow, Spends Last Hours Reading Bible and Smoking Cigarettes.

Okla. City, Okla., July 27.—Spending his few remaining hours of life in reading the Bible and smoking cigarettes, John Henry Prather, a young negro, is awaiting the call to the gallows tomorrow morning. The near approach of the day of execution and the knowledge that there is little or no probability of a respite, have caused no noticeable change in the demeanor of the condemned man.

Prather and four other young negroes were convicted of the murder of W. H. Archie in this city last April. Prather has never denied firing the fatal shot, saying he committed the murder after he and his companions had robbed Archie so he could be "able to say he had murdered a white man."

The execution of the other four negroes has been delayed by the appeal of their cases to the high court.

BELLIGERENT TONE TOWARD ENGLAND IS SHOWN BY GERMANY; EUROPE IS EXCITED

German Press Is Aggressive Toward England on Moroccan Crisis—Resent an Interference.

Berlin, July 27.—"Hands off" is the blunt warning to England sounded by the German press today in the Moroccan crisis. Unmistakably aggressive and belligerent is the tone. German newspapers assert the Moroccan trouble is between France and Germany and irritation over England's interference is plainly discernable.

More Acute.—London, July 27.—The Anglo-German question over Morocco became more acute today. Excitement prevailed in naval circles when leave orders on the naval vessels of the home fleet were suspended and the fleet ordered to coal at once.

Points At Issue.—London, Eng., July 27.—The points leading up to the European crisis with a battle of "commercial interests" in four nations—France, Germany, Spain and England, in the Moroccan situation are outlined as follows: Spain owns narrow fringes along the Moroccan coast. France is nominally mistress of all territory east and south of Morocco. Keenest rivalry exists in extending their respective "spheres of influence."

1903—France loans the Sultan 7,500,000 francs.

1904—French government arranged for French syndicate to make big loan to Morocco. Spain and France sign agreement not to extend "spheres of influence."

1905—Sultan rejects French demand for permission to establish more military posts and for French officers to command Sultan's troops.

1906—Germany demands that "open door" be maintained in Morocco. Germany extends commercial influence. Offers big loan, resented by Spain and France. Acute crisis. Algerian convention of powers called. Emperor William strikes army along Rhine, presumably engaging in maneuvers. Insists on German attitude. Forces retirement of M. Delaune, French minister. Agreement signed.

1911—Spain and France extend military lines. More recent aggression. Tribes revolt. Germany sends gunboat Panther to Agadir to "protect interests." France resents. England backs up France.

Stand by Rights.—With reports that King George's health is seriously impaired from worry over the Moroccan situation as regards Germany, and with apocryphal this afternoon by Premier Asquith and Arthur Balfour in parliament making it plain that England will stand on her rights, all England was alive today with war talk.

Asquith in statement.—(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) London, July 27.—In a statement to the House of Commons today Premier Asquith said that the Moroccan situation had reached a point at which it was bound to become difficult and harassing unless a solution was found.

TO USE HUGE KITES IN WIRELESS TESTS

Washington, July 27.—Great kites are to be used by the Navy Department in a series of wireless tests this summer, it was announced today.

The kites, which will be about seven feet in height, will be used to elevate the antennae of ship wireless sets. By this elevation it is hoped that the range of the naval wireless will be greatly increased.

The range of wireless stations on board warships is limited by the difficulty in elevating the antennae, as it is impossible to erect wireless masts of any considerable height. With the kites, the antennae may be elevated to a height of 1,000 feet or more. The range of a wireless, provided the electrical power is increased, is proportional to the height of the wires.

The experiments with the kites will be conducted by Eadgar Boynton, in command of the torpedo boat Stringham. He will operate in Chesapeake Bay and vicinity.

BRAKEMAN IN FIGHT WITH ARMED HOBOES ON FREIGHT TRAIN

Harry Parish of Baraboo Overpowers Two Desperate Assaultants on Train 582 Near Evansville Early Today.

Two desperate hoboes had their plans frustrated at an early hour this morning by the unusual nerve and daring of brakeman Harry Parish, who overpowered both the ruffians, took their loaded revolvers from them and after treating them to a sound beating threw them from the train. According to the story told by the train men the two hoboes were heading their way on freight train 582 which is due here from Baraboo at 4 a. m. Bent on plunder and evidently prepared to resist any opposition that might be offered by the train crew they broke into a car loaded with flour and were calmly making a survey of the contents until brakeman Parish heard an unusual noise and proceeded to investigate. Noticing a man in the car Parish advanced toward him, thinking he was alone and ordered him to leave. The hobo refused to comply with the order and when he saw that the brakeman was not to be deterred from his purpose by a simple refusal he produced a revolver to make his refusal more emphatic. In spite of this paragon the plucky brakeman advanced and in less than a minute he had both the desperadoes cowering before him and his weapon pointed at his breast and another desperado looking on from behind. A repetition of the first act then followed very quickly and the second desperado found himself minus his gun and badly bruised and beaten. With the two villains then at his mercy Parish proceeded to give them a beating that they would remember for some time and when he considered them sufficiently repaid for their attempted mischief he told them to "beat it" and they lost no time in obeying the command. In spite of the fact that the train was running at a fair rate of speed the desperadoes preferred to take their chances on terra firma rather than in the company of such a determined and capable companion as the brakeman proved to be. All this happened between Oregon and Evansville and before the train pulled into the latter station the fireman and engineer on the train were first apprised of the encounter when the plucky brakeman went to the forward end of the train and covered both the men with the two desperate weapons which he had taken as prizes from the holdup men. Both guns, one a 32 and the other 38 calibre, were fully loaded and either one alone in the hands of an unknown and desperate looking individual would have been sufficient to cool the ardor of the average man under similar circumstances. After the men at the head end of the train heard the brakeman's story they watched the two cowering villains take their departure from the train as it was slowing up at the station. Conductor Smith was in charge of the train at the time and he knew nothing of what had transpired until the rest of the crew told him shortly afterward. All the men are loud in their praise of the plucky displayed by brakeman Parish and they consider his feat the most daring that has been performed on the Northwestern road for many years. Mr. Parish whose home is at Baraboo, is employed regularly on this run and it is very likely that the "boss" will give this train a wide berth if these two gentlemen of the road will give them a tip.

ROWLEY MADE PLEA AND WAS SENTENCED

Young Man Accused of Obtaining Money by False Pretenses Sent to State Prison for Nine Months.

Harold Rowley of Rockford, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses from Dan Condon, a Greek fruit dealer of this city on the ninth of July, pleaded guilty to the charges in municipal court this morning and was sentenced to nine months at hard labor in the state prison at Waupun. Rowley, who is a young man twenty-one years of age, was arraigned yesterday afternoon and asked for an examination, the examination being set for next Monday morning. The legal meaning of the examination being explained to him, however, he expressed a desire to plead at once and signed a waiver not to hold the examination. The judge fixed the date for the trial as August 3 and explained to Rowley, that if the latter so desired, a trial could be given him, but Rowley expressed the desire to plead at once, a petition to that effect having been filed with the court. The maximum penalty for the offense, under the statutes, is an imprisonment to five years in jail, fined $100 and costs with the alternative of five days additional in court yesterday afternoon. "Biddy," as he is known about town, got joyfully intoxicated Tuesday night and was thrown into the lockup. He railed quite a hubbub until an early hour Wednesday morning, but finally succumbed and lay in a drunken stupor, from which he had not aroused yesterday morning.

when the other prisoners were taken into court.

Civil Case.
Summons in the case of the Milwaukee Woolen Manufacturing company against William Crooks of Emerson Grove were made returnable today but the case was never called, a settlement having been made out of court. The dispute was over the terms of a contract between the two parties, but was settled a few days ago.

Engine 552 which has been laid up for minor repairs for a few days, was taken out for service this morning.

Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul.
ENGINEER JAMES DUNNE
IS SLOWLY IMPROVING.

Engineer James Dunne who was injured in the wreck near Bardwell on June 27, is improving very slowly according to the reports of local transportation men. He is suffering after-effects of the shock both to his nervous system and to the rest of his body that were not expected to result from his injuries which at the time appeared very slight. It is thought that the steam which he inhaled injured the tissues of his lungs more than was believed after the first examination. The fall, when he was thrown from his cab is thought to have inflicted internal injuries that are now retarding the progress of his convalescence.

Judging by his present condition it is believed that Mr. Dunne will not be able to resume his duties on the line for a few months. All who realize what a narrow escape he had from death are of the opinion that he was remarkably fortunate to be able ever to return to work.

Engineer Stephens and Fireman McLaughlin went out on 194 on the C. and M. division this morning.

Dowle and Foster took 122 on the regular run on the C. and M. division.

Schleker and McAllister have charge of 146 today.

EARLY RESIDENT OF COUNTY AND A FORTY NINER PASSED AWAY

William Henry Newton Died Suddenly Yesterday Afternoon at His Home in Town of Johnston at Age of 87 Years.

William Henry Newton, for sixty years a resident of Rock county, and one of the last survivors of the throng of prospectors who hurried west to California in '49 at the time of the gold craze, died very suddenly at his home in the town of Johnston, about six o'clock last evening.

Death was very sudden and unexpected as Mr. Newton had been enjoying the best of health. About five o'clock yesterday afternoon, he left the house with the intention of going to the barn to feed his horse, as he was planning on driving to his cottage at Delavan lake early this morning.

When he did not return to the house a search was instituted and he was found lying unconscious in a hay mow in the barn. He was carried to his bed and medical aid summoned, but he passed away within less than an hour without regaining consciousness. It had been noted that recently he had a tendency to stumble over small objects in his path although he did not complain at all as to any feeling of sickness. The cause assigned for death from these indications is apoplexy.

Mr. Newton was born in Bethel, Vermont, in 1824. Here he was raised to manhood and received his early education. In his early twenties he became enamored with the tales of gold and wealth which came from California, and with a number of friends made up one of the parties of prospectors that traveled the distance across the continent in 1849.

He spent six or seven years in the California gold fields and met with some degree of success. He later tired of the business, however, and in the early fifties, returned east. He settled in Rock county in the town of Johnston, where he has since resided.

He was married sixty-two years ago and he and his wife, who survives him, have lived most happily on their farm home in Johnston. Although he was past eighty-seven years of age, he retained the memory of youth and took a most active interest in the affairs of the day. He was also very active and could move with an agility which was surprising. While at his summer home at Lake Delavan he was accustomed to go in bathing at least once a day, enjoying the sport fully as much as young people in the prime of life.

Mr. Newton possessed a rich and noble character, which drew to him a host of friends throughout the county. He had an enviable reputation for honor and integrity and his cheerful disposition made him an ever pleasant companion. In his home life he was all that could be asked of a loving husband and father.

Born his wife he leaves three children, one daughter and two sons: Mrs. Arnold E. Stoughton of Janesville; Carl E. Johnston; and Earl Newton of Fort Atkinson.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock from the late residence in the town of Johnston.

Frank C. Ludden.
Frank C. Ludden, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Ludden of the town of Porter, died Wednesday afternoon at the home of his parents. Mr. Ludden, who was a well known and popular young man had been sick for nearly a year and a half. He died at the age of 21 years. A large number of friends will mourn his untimely death. Besides his parents, he leaves to mourn him two sisters, Mrs. William Hilken of Evansville, and Miss Mary Ludden of Porter. The funeral services will be held Saturday from St. Patrick's church. The hour will be announced later.

Preparing for Sorrow.

A man must make up his mind that sorrows and troubles are sure to come. You must have your share and perhaps more than you think is your share. When you have fixed this fact in your mind, you have made much progress toward meeting it manfully, with patience, faith and hope.—Christian Observer.

Why Be Sick When All Can Be Well
Chiropractic Science The Great Aid to Suffering Humanity

Chiropractic goes right straight to the cause of disease and removes it, and that's the only way to get well—MOVE THE CAUSE OF THE DISEASE. The Philosophy of Chiropractic is to let nature make you well; if your spine is in perfect shape you can throw off all disease. If the cause of the disease is removed you will get well in just the same way you got sick. Chiropractic adjustments correct subluxations of the spine. Subluxations of the spine cause a pressure on the nerves leading from the brain to all parts of the body. As long as the pressure remains the life impulses which flow through the nerves are stopped and the parts of the body which are nourished by these nerves cannot perform their functions. If Chiropractic adjustments are given, the pressure removed, the life impulses flow readily then and not until then will you get well.

If you suffer today, do like hundreds of others have done, come to the office for an interview. Examination free. You will readily learn why hundreds have come from all over Rock county and have gotten well.

WATER CONSERVATION.

While the necessity for water conservation for the Rock river is not at a critical point as yet, still the day is not far distant when the present stream will have dwindled down to a mere rivulet. In fact, during the past fifty years the stream has decreased in volume considerably and the days when logs could be rafted down, and Mississippi river steamers sail up as far as Janesville, is forgotten history. Conservation of the water supply of the nation is a subject that is being discussed in Washington and wherever thinking men are gathered. The reclamation of the great arid deserts of the west by irrigation dams, such as the Belle Fourche project recently completed by a Janesville firm, shows the trend of the government on these questions.

Despatches bring the plowing news that recent rains in fourteen of the great grain-producing states of the West and Northwest were worth millions to the farmers in those parts. This may easily be true. Saving the corn crop alone was an item representing millions. But the crop outlook of the entire country has been immensely improved by the downpour, for the storm has swept across the land from the western slope of the Rockies to the Atlantic ocean. It would be impossible to estimate the total value of these rains in dollars and cents. Consequently benefits to be considered in any proper computation of their worth would surely run the figures into billions.

In connection with the welcome intelligence referred to comes the interesting information that the Missouri river is greatly swollen. It has a depth at Kansas City, for instance, of twenty-six feet. This means, of course, that as a result of the heavy rains a tremendous volume of water is being carried down to the Mississippi, and eventually to the Gulf and the ocean, through the channel of the "Big Muddy." It will run noblesly and uselessly, as it has been wont to do through the centuries, until it shall have drained its tributaries and itself dry.

Kansas City, to touch only one point, for a week or two will have more water than its now steamboat line could possibly require. There is, however, no means of holding the flow of the river in check until another rainy day, and the channel at Kansas City may soon become too shallow to be comfortable. Likewise, up through Missouri and Kansas, Iowa and the Dakotas, when the water shall have run off, the farmers may, as usual, have reason to wish that some of it, at least, might have been harnessed. There is never a dry spell in the west and northwest, any more than in the south and southwest, when the annual prodigious waste of water is not regretted.

Time and again efforts have been made by far-sighted and right-thinking people to arouse popular interest in the conservation of the waters of the Mississippi valley. It does not call for extraordinary engineering skill or extraordinary expenditure. Competent engineers have long since shown the way. Sometime the work will be taken in hand. When it is the west will have at all seasons, and not sporadically as now, water enough to irrigate its farms, produce its power and float its steamboats.

NEED FOR HOMES.

That Janesville needs more homes is an evident fact. While the last census did not show such a material increase in population, still the fact remains that many new families are moving here seeking houses or flats to live in. One business man who is on the road, but whose headquarters are in Janesville, stated recently that after six months of seeking a house or flat where he could establish a home, he had rented a flat in Madison and would move his household goods there this week. It might be stated that this one particular family have had their goods in storage and have been forced to board. A dozen similar cases could be cited. Janesville is a good city to live in. All admit that, but too many persons own their own homes and too little of the surplus capital of those that have it to, is invested in houses or flats. There are plenty of vacant lots where suitable flat buildings or rows of modern homes could be erected that would bring good interest on the investment in rentals. If Janesville should be invaded by a few first-class factories where would the workmen or working women be housed? It is a problem that confronts the city and one which should demand immediate attention.

A PLEASING TRIBUTE.

John Gollner, the secretary and treasurer of the recent military celebration has finished his work of paying bills and sending out the rebate checks to the persons who subscribed to the bond issue. The work of the committee was a hard one and they labored under considerable difficulties in many cases. It is a thankless task at best to work on a committee for the public and the following letter received by Mr. Gollner, was most appreciated by that gentleman and other members of the committee.

Janesville, Wis., July 21, 1911.
Mr. John Gollner:
Dear Sir: Your favor with check received, for which please accept our thanks. Your committee deserve recognition for the success of the celebration and we presume many have extended congratulations and thanks. We wish to add ours.
Respectfully,
FOND & BAILEY.

Milwaukee business men are interested in good roads. The secretary of the Business Men's association is even out working, with a pick and shovel, perhaps, to show how it can be done. Mr. Cannon is a hustler, but one would hardly expect him to really do any actual work.

That Lorimer investigation in Washington yesterday brought out one interesting fact, that Chicago newspapers have in the past employed paid slanders in their circulation department.

Nebraska really launched the Taft presidential boom at the recent republican state convention. Not only launched it, but also gave it a good big shove out into deep water.

The members of congress now feel that their duty is done and they want to adjourn as soon as possible. Does anyone blame them very much?

Think how Mr. Bryan must feel when Mr. Harrison was named for President at his own democratic state gathering at his own home city.

Chicago had enough native gun men and it did not need a Illinois to show the city that carrying weapons on its streets should be abolished.

President Taft said something worth considering on that troublesome Alaskan problem in his message to congress.

Europe is somewhat stirred although it is certain that France will not really try and kick Germany.

PRESS COMMENT.

Money to Burn. Chicago Examiner: Uncle Sam has saved the price of two tons of coal by burning $2,000,000,000 of war-time bonds. In vain the officials tried to get rid of the old 7-30's by submitting them to the incinerators which grind up discarded bills; the incinerators wouldn't work and the cutter balked. Mr. Fire was the only alternative, and the redeemed issues up to 1898 were reduced to ashes under the watchful eyes of treasury experts.

What They're After. Woman Record (Portland): The proposed law passed by the United States senate in which the expenditures of candidates for congressional and senatorial honors is limited, places a limit on the amount to be spent by the candidates but the friends of candidates can spend all they may see fit. A law of that sort is bound to be evaded.

All for the Cause. Holot News: James Kealey of the Chicago Tribune yesterday testified that the paper spent $20,000 verifying White's confession of taking a bribe to vote for Lorimer before it printed it. Besides this, it paid White

$2,250 for the story. Which is some revelation about what it costs to run a metropolitan daily paper.

Too Busy Otherwise. Oskosh Northwestern: The several candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination don't seem to be paying much attention to the thirteen questions that have been addressed to them by William Jennings Bryan as to their stand on a variety of matters.

Long Suspense. Green Bay Gazette: If it takes Canada as long to decide regarding Canadian reciprocity as it did the United States it will be a few years before citizens will be in a position to know regarding what effect it is to have regarding the high cost of living.

A Healthier Place. Monro Times: If all the money that will be invested in getting quick making stocks in the next five years could be put into the postal savings banks at only two per cent our people would be much wealthier.

The O. F. Way. Racine Times: Two girls equipped with water-wings as life preservers have been drowned in Chicago. For certain safety nothing can beat "the hickory limb" plan.

Reparation. Milwaukee Journal: Those rains worth millions of dollars were providential as coming to the rescue of unscrupulous farmers who bid fair to be disappointed by the horrors of the reciprocity treaty.

Crucifix. Milwaukee Sentinel: If the price of hay keeps on soaring it will soon be cheaper to feed horses on breakfast food. But few men are cruel enough to inflict so cruel a torture on the poor, dumb animals.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

THE HAPPIEST WOMAN IN TOWN.

No; she does not live out on the avenue where wide lawns spell dignity and where one's house is as big and as ugly as one's purse can buy.

She lives in a five room bungalow on a side street where the pavement has not yet arrived. The lawn in front is a tiny one, but in summer the house is a bower of beauty.

It is a cozy home—all in one. As the mortgage which covered it grows smaller the porch about the place grows larger. It was built for two. It is now occupied by four—himself, herself, the girl and the boy—“us four and no more.”

Himself is a man, every inch. Hearty, independent, energetic, steady as a clock, he has his big feet firmly planted on the first rounds of the success ladder, and slowly, carefully, he is climbing.

He loves herself and no other. The boy and the girl are healthy, happy youngsters. The boy whistles, and the girl sings. Herself never complains of shattered nerves.

Economize? Pshaw the pennies? Yes, but herself is happy just the same. They have enough and a little to spare for the very poor. Pleasure? Why, there's pleasure in doing his Sunday out and the boy's socks. There's zest in turning and making over garments.

It is like working out a puzzle to make both ends of the household meet. She does it. There is no envy of those who live in big houses and go in automobiles. Father is getting on in the world. The children have good appetites.

Why shouldn't she be happy? Love is the greatest thing in the world, and contentment is the next greatest. And there are both love and contentment in her home.

Or—

Put it this way: In service is compensation. There's joy in doing for those you love.

If herself, therefore, must wrinkle her brow over a household problem, studying how to cut the corners, why, measure for measure—sure as the law of gravity, certain as the law of chemical affinity—herself is paid a hundred-fold.

Ah, little woman, how rich! Enjoy while you may. Who knows? Your children may grow up to honor your gray hairs, or—the fates forbid!—one of them may almost break your heart.

Or some day you may live in a big house where things are but gilded and where arms are empty and life is hollow.

Enjoy yourself and yourself and the other two!

THE POET PHILOSOPHER

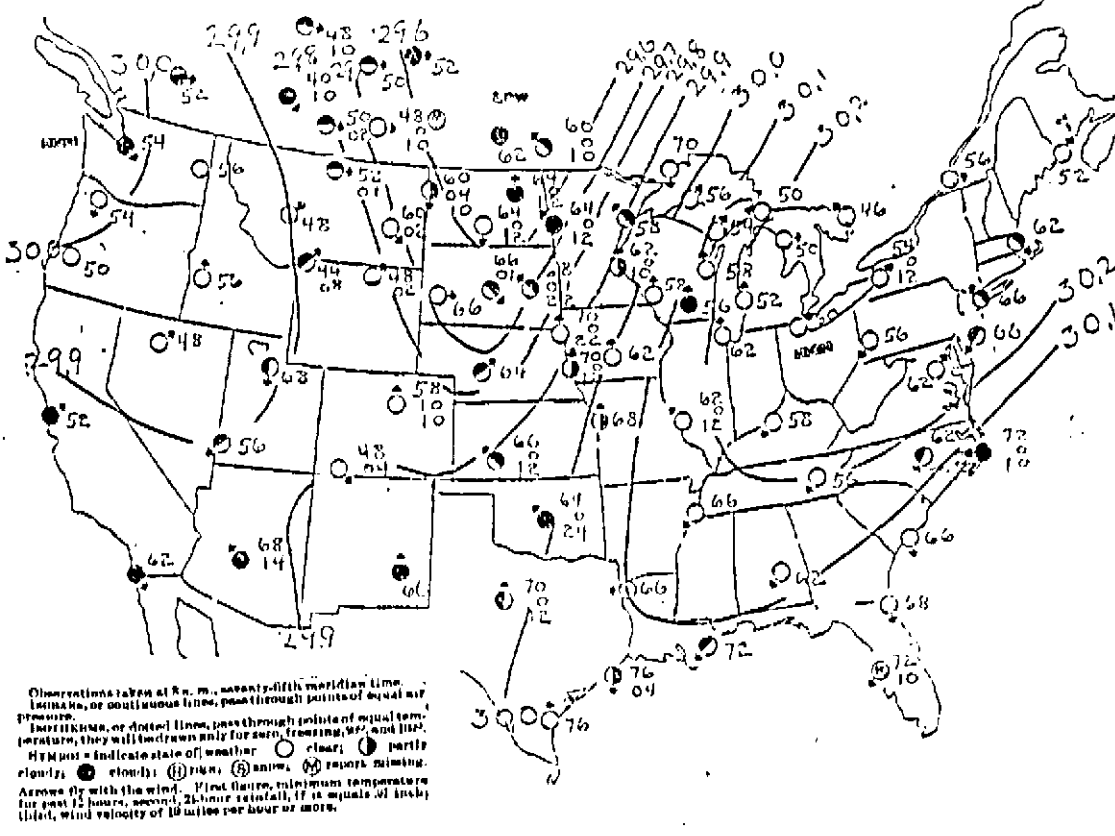

(Copyright, 1909, by George Matthews Adams.)
By WALT MASON.

The summer's swiftly gliding by. It couldn't well be slower; and soon we'll cease to glow and cool. The fly, and howl at the mosquito. A few more busy, bustling weeks, and summer will be over! The frost will sparkle on the leaves, the sun will sparkle on the clover! The sun behind the wintry clouds will sink, its task forgotten; and we no more in wildered crowds will tell how hard we're sweating. And when the snow has hid the flowers, which now the fields are throwing, we'll talk of golden summer hours with tears of all too full. And that's the way we all are built: our heads are made of leather; in summer, when our collars wilt, we long for wintry weather. And when the

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

The area of high atmospheric pressure that prevailed in the south yesterday, is now moving over toward the northeast. It is accompanied by generally fair weather, with moderate temperatures in the east and south. The barometric depression noted yesterday in the northern Rockies, has now advanced to the Dakotas, and has been attended during the past 24 hours by showers and thunderstorms along the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, and in the plateau region. It is fair, with moderate temperature along the Pacific coast.

How To Read the Weather Map

By Eric R. Miller, Local Forecaster, U. S. Weather Bureau.

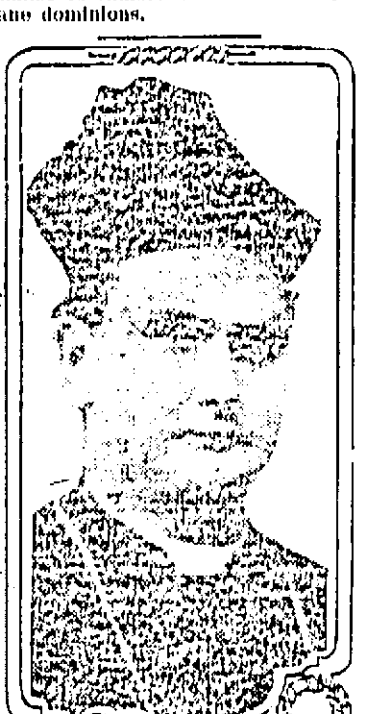

The key to the weather map is found in the black lines that are drawn in loops and curves over the map. These outline disturbances of the atmosphere. The two principal kinds of atmospheric disturbance are the anticyclone, or area of high air pressure, and the cyclone, as it is scientifically called, or area of low air pressure. These are marked H and L on the weather map. The fundamental principles of weather forecasting are, first, that these disturbances have corresponding kinds of weather associated with them, and second, that they move from west to east at an average rate of 25 miles per hour, or six hundred miles per day.

Taking up these principles in detail, we find that the cyclone or area of low pressure is always accompanied by cloudy and rainy weather, the wind flows inward toward the center in long spirals, whence the name cyclone. The spiral inflow of wind is left handed or contra clockwise so that the cyclone or area of low air pressure has southerly winds on its front or easterly side, and northerly, usually northwest, winds at its rear or westerly side. On this account, partially also on account of the condensation of latent heat by the condensation of rainfall, the LOW is warm on its rear or westerly side, and cold on its front or easterly side. Hence the passage of a LOW is attended by rising temperature, southerly winds, and increasing cloudiness until the center passes, then falling temperature, northerly winds, and diminishing cloudiness. The interaction of the southerly winds in front, and the northerly winds at the rear along the axis of the LOW is the cause of thunderstorms and occasionally of tornadoes. Hence thunderstorms are also to be expected when the southern half of the axis of LOW passes.

The intensity of the Low and of all the weather phenomena accompanying it is indicated by the departure of the air pressure from the normal at or near its center. This is indicated on the weather maps by an increase in the number of lines in loops or rings around the center of the Low. This is so because the lines, known as isobars or lines of equal pressure, are drawn for equal intervals in the scale of pressures, so that when the pressure is very low, or very high in the anticyclone, it requires a great many lines to indicate the departure from normal. The pressure is indicated in terms of the height of mercury column that the pressure of the air will balance. Thus the line marked 30.0 indicated that at all the places on the map that it passes through the pressure of the air will equal the weight of a column of mercury thirty inches high, the line marked 29.8 shows a pressure of the air equal to that of a column of mercury twenty-nine inches and eight tenths of an inch high.

The chief characteristic of the anticyclone or HIGH, is clearness of the sky. This produces different conditions of the other elements according to the season, because the clear sky affords free access to the rays of heat and light from the sun, and free egress to the rays of heat from the earth and the resulting condition at the earth's surface is determined by the excess of insolation or heating by the sun, or by the excess of radiation from the earth. The former condition prevails in summer, so that the HIGH is then marked by excessive temperatures, and especially if the HIGH moves slowly enough not to import cooler air from more northerly regions. In winter on the other hand, the greater length of the night gives ample opportunity for the escape of heat from the surface of the earth, and furthermore, the circulation of the atmosphere is then especially rapid, so that the anticyclone acts as a carrier of cold from northerly regions where its path trends from north to south, as is usually the case in this part of the world.

The important thing then, in using the weather map to understand what sort of weather is coming, is to pay attention first of all to the High and Low, noting their positions, their intensity, and their rate of motion by comparing today's map with yesterday's.

BLACK SETTER DOG KILLED BY OFFICER

Animal Which Attacked Other Dogs And Tore Clothes of Fred Blakeley And Frank Deers, Shot Near Woolen Mills.

Officer Sam Brown this morning near the Rock River Woolen Mills a black Gordon setter, which had run amuck in the city and which may have been mad. The animal, which apparently belonged to some farmer, came into the city from the east side, running at every dog he met on his path, giving each canine a couple of shakes, racing on until he met another dog, when the same tactics were pursued.

Fred Blakeley, who was riding a bicycle, had the tail of his coat torn while he was riding his bicycle, the animal jumping and catching hold of the coat and then running off. Frank Deers suffered a similar loss, the dog tearing the front of his garment. Officer Sam Brown was sent in pursuit and traced the dog as far as Center avenue on foot and then returned to the station and he and Officer Peter Champion, in the police pacer, followed the dog down Center avenue. At the Monterey bridge, the animal, after putting to flight several dogs on the bridge, turned and ran along the river bank. A crowd of small boys guided Officer Brown along the path taken by the animal, which was finally overtaken near the island. A well directed shot from a shotgun put an end to the canine's journeying. Funeral services for the dog were held on the spot, a shovel being borrowed from the Woolen Mills.

HEALTH FILMS WILL BE SHOWN IN CITY

Health Exhibit of Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association To Be Shown in Janesville, Aug. 2nd.

The Moving Picture Health Exhibit, which for the past six weeks has been given in Milwaukee by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association to enormous crowds in various school halls and parks, is to be shown in Janesville on the evening of August 2nd. The exhibit will be in personal charge of Dr. Harvey Dee Brown, General Lecturer for the association, who will give an address in connection with the same.

The films which are to be shown out-of-doors consist of:

(1) "THE RED CROSS SEAL", showing typical breeding places of the white plague, the work of a visiting nurse, the cleaning up of dangerous environments and the cure of patient in the open air. Along with this is a very attractive story of sacrifice which appeals to all hearts.

(2) "THE MARY HO LEANED", a story of the improvement of the milk supply of a great city. This is a very interesting drama of real life.

(3) Either "THE WEDDING BELL", illustrating the transmission of typhoid fever by means of artificial flowers made in a sweat shop, or "THE FLY PEST", showing the dangers from the house fly.

In addition to the films stereopticon slides will be used. This is the first time that moving pictures have been utilized for popular educational work of this kind and so far the experiment has been very successful. The exhibit is now to be taken into twenty-five of the largest cities of the state. Co-operating with the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association in this effort are the University Extension Division, the Milwaukee Bureau of Efficiency and Economy, and the Yellow Company, which has loaned the films used. The place will be announced later.

Union Service Sunday: Sunday evening at Carroll Methodist church, Rev. T. D. Williams will preside. Dr. J. T. D. Williams will preside. Dr. J. T. D. Williams will preside. Dr. J. T. D. Williams will preside.

SCOUTS IN OUTING UP RIVER TONIGHT

Over Forty Boys Left This Afternoon on Expedition to Crystal Springs for Over Night.

Nearly the entire number of the Boy Scouts, over forty in all, left at three o'clock this afternoon, on a hike and overnight expedition up the river to Crystal Springs. Capt. Jacobs was in charge of the squad and the line of march was out of the city on the Madison road to the Four Mile bridge and then down the river on the east side to Crystal Springs. It was expected that this march of about seven miles would take about two hours.

Each boy carried his small "jump" tent and a supply of provisions for two meals. Upon arrival at the camping place the camp drill was performed and the supper prepared. Tonight guards will be set for the entire night, each being relieved at stated intervals. They expected to break camp at five o'clock tomorrow morning and return to the city on the east side of the river.

SIMON'S FLIGHT NEAR. SAY HAITIAN REPORTS

President of Republic Plans Departure From Capital—Trouble Feared After He Leaves.

Port au Prince, July 27.—The insurgent army is rapidly closing on Port au Prince, and it is said the departure of President Simon cannot long be deferred. Additional trouble is feared when he leaves.

U. S. W. Fuenles, minister from the United States, has notified the administration that his government will oppose any bombardment of the rebel cities.

The United States cruiser Des Moines has arrived here. The German cruiser Bremen is expected.

The Haitian gunboat 17 Decembre left here for Aux Cayes, town on the south coast, carrying government troops under command of Antoine Simon, son of the president. The vessel is manned by an American crew. The troops will march on Jérémie, where the revolutionists are in control.

The gunboat Vertieres also sailed, but her destination was kept secret.

President Simon witnessed the departure of these vessels, and later, addressing the members of the diplomatic corps, said that the situation was not grave. He had decided to resist the movement against him, which he considered as brigandage and without importance, he said.

The foreign diplomats have decided to await further developments before taking action.

Washington, July 27.—Comforting assurances of the safety of Americans at Cape Haitien, which is in the hands of the revolutionists, was received by the state department. Consul Livingston, at the rebel port, called that the citizens of this country are now fully protected by the scout cruiser Chester and the gunboat Peoria and that the food supply was ample. No American has been injured at Cape Haitien.

The test in the most suspicious case, that of Edgar Herrmann, the hospital orderly, was found to be negative in a second examination, and although a third test will be made, the hospital authorities remained confident they had no cholera on their hands.

The case of the laborer, named Louis Maeh, which was regarded with suspicion at the hospital, turned out to be nothing worse than summer complaint.

To Cultivate Memory.

The best way to remember a thing is thoroughly to understand it, and often to recall it to mind. MAYOR MAY ARREST COUNCILMEN.

Honeywell, Kans.—Mrs. Ella Wilson, Mayor of Honeywell, is in the midst of a desperate struggle with the councilmen, five in number, and upon the advice of Governor Stubbs may be forced to take court action to get from them the results which she promised in her pre-election campaign. The councilmen are defying Mrs. Wilson chiefly because she is a woman and because she appointed women as chief of police and city clerk. The sentiment of the town runs with Mrs. Wilson, however, in her campaign for a cleaner and better government.

So strenuous has become the fight between the Mayor and the council that she sought the advice of Governor Stubbs of Kansas who backed her in every detail. He told her to take the case to the courts if the councilmen did not behave.

LARGEST TWO YEAR OLD IN THE WORLD.

James Adolph Cody, as strong as he is big, with a capacity for eating that astonished scientists.

Mount Airy, Ga.—Georgia claims the biggest two-year-old boy in the world in James Adolph Cody, the 110-pound boy who has astonished and puzzled scientists of the world. He is just three months over two years old and is as strong, as large and eats as heartily as many boys of sixteen years. He never had a day's illness in his life and is perfectly normal in everything but his physical proportions.

James Adolph wasn't brought up on a bottle—not after the first few weeks, at least. Here is his daily menu:

Breakfast.—Four large biscuits with butter or gravy. He insists on molasses with these and usually gets it. Two glasses of buttermilk are his regular portion and sometimes he drinks two cups of coffee. They say coffee stimulates a child's growth, but it hasn't made any noticeable impression on this youngster.

Dinner.—A big plate of turnip, greens or cabbage; or any other vegetables convenient, baked bacon, corn bread, plenty of biscuit and a whole pie. Two glasses of buttermilk needed. The same as breakfast; biscuit, butter and molasses.

DECIDED CHANGE IN POLITICAL AFFAIRS SINCE CORONATION

Seemingly Inclination of House of Lords of England Has Changed With Regard to Surrendering the Veto Power.

London, July 27.—A great change has come over the face of political affairs in England in the past two or three weeks. Before the coronation it looked as if the House of Lords had made up its mind to yield to the liberal demand that it surrender its veto power and become a mere consultative body with the right to delay but not finally to reject bills passed by the House of Commons. Today there are many indications that the peers have decided to fight. If they do fight, the engagement promises to be something terrible.

Popular Referendum.
The veto bill reached the Lords, after its passage in the lower house, just before recess for the coronation holidays. Immediately following the recessment of Parliament, Lord Lansdowne and other peers offered certain amendments to the bill. These amendments are still under discussion but the more important of them seem certain of adoption. Their essential feature is that, instead of giving the House of Commons the last voice on legislation, bills which it passes and which the Lords reject must be submitted to a popular referendum if they concern such matters as Irish home rule or "any other grave matter upon which the electorate has not been sufficiently consulted."

Effect is Unfair.
The referendum proposition looks fair at first sight but the real idea is that when both houses are Conservative there will never be any referendum because there will never be any difference of opinion between them. When the House of Commons is Liberal and the House of Lords is Conservative, the referendum will always be held up by the Conservative House of Lords, rendering any Liberal administration one long series of expensive referendums after referendums and delay after delay. The result will not only be to give the Conservatives two chances on all bills to the Liberal one, but it will give all Liberal administrations an appearance of continual turmoil and conflict, while the Conservative ones will invariably move as smoothly as if greased.

Commons Will Reject.
The Commons will therefore assuredly reject the amended veto bill. The Lords, it appears now, will refuse to pass it in its original form. It will be Liberal Premier Asquith's cue to ask King George to create enough new Liberal peers to outvote the Conservatives in the present House of Lords. There has been much speculation as to what the King would do in such a case. Now, King George is well known to be a Conservative at heart. He would probably, nevertheless, yield to the Liberal demand for the new peers if he considered resistance hopeless. There are indications, however, that he has recently been convinced that it would not be hopeless, though there can be no question that it must be dangerous.

Lords Ready to Fight.
The coronation ceremonies brought to London for the first time in several years a full attendance of the peers. They came to London to take part in the coronation but during the intervals they were far more seriously occupied than this. In the absence of any clear lead from the monarch at the head of their order, the rank and file took the opportunity to form their own policy. From all quarters come indications that they made up their minds to fight. There is no doubt that the coronation encouraged them. They took their parts in it very seriously. They believe that their appearance in Westminster Abbey, robed and coronated, impressed the people immensely. Indeed, many of them seized the chance to show themselves in the streets in full regalia in the hope of heightening this supposedly good impression upon the masses. They are convinced that their popularity must be revived.

Coronation an Asset.
They regard the coronation as a great elevating asset. It has made the people, they think, at least temporarily enthusiastic for the aristocracy and the King. They seriously have the view that, if they can force an election within a few weeks, the coronation would insure a Conservative victory.

If the King refuses, the Liberal demand for new peers such an election must follow immediately. It must be borne in mind that the peers have the right of access to the King. It is certain that they are exulting in this right and that great pressure is being brought upon the throne to reverse the Liberal demand. With his sympathies already on the side of the Conservatives and all their assurances being poured into his ears that he and the aristocracy can win if he stands firm, it would be strange if he did not incline to take the peers' view. At any rate, it is the popular opinion in political circles—Liberal and Conservative alike—that he does take their view.

Election Prospects.
The new peers being refused, Premier Asquith and his Liberal minority will have to resign and there must be a fresh election, perhaps after a few days' administration by Arthur J. Balfour, the Conservative leader, who can, however, last but not the shortest possible time with a Liberal majority against him in the Commons.

The next election, if one comes under such circumstances, will be the fiercest ever fought in England. It will be surprising if it passes without bloodshed.

County and District Clerks.
Galveston, Tex., July 27.—Improved methods of keeping records of mortgages, licenses, naturalization papers, taxes and other matters with which they have to deal, are slated for extensive discussion at the nineteenth annual meeting of the County and District Clerks Association of Texas, which began in this city this morning and will continue in session until Saturday.

STATE BOARD ISSUES LATE INFORMATION

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., July 27.—The state board of immigration has entered upon a far-reaching plan of encouraging settlement of undeveloped sections of Wisconsin, the project involving the education of foreign colonies in the agricultural advantages offered in unsettled parts of the Badger state. Letters were written to all community leaders in the state urging them to communicate with their countrymen—friends and relatives—within or without the state and even in those native lands, and to interest them in Wisconsin's resources as offered by the undeveloped parts of the state where it is comparatively easy to get a foothold for an independent existence. These nationalities thus interested included Scandinavian, Bohemian, Polish, German and the Slavic colonies.

Campaign At State Fair.
The community leaders were reached by the immigration board through the aid of the county officers. The advantage thus gained is followed up by personal letters and by literature in the language of the immigrants. In order still further to create interest in the subject, the board is seeking the names of all settlers in the more undeveloped sections to send exhibitions of their land products for display at the state fair in Milwaukee in September. The board will be quartered in a tent, 50 by 80 feet, in one of the most favored sites on the fair grounds, where the choicest samples of grains, vegetables, fruits and all farm products grown in undeveloped parts of Wisconsin, will be on display for the education of prospective settlers or investors.

The board of immigration is composed of Secretary of State J. A. Frear, Dean H. L. Russell of the college of agriculture, and Charles L. Hill, Rosendale, president of the state board of agriculture. The immigration commissioner, B. G. Pecker, is conducting the correspondence incident to the carrying out of the campaign of education which is being conducted.

Display At Chicago.
The board will have the choicest of its state fair selections on display at the United States land and irrigation congress at the Coliseum in Chicago, Nov. 18 to Dec. 9, co-operating with the Wisconsin Advancement association. Here they will be in competition for honors with similar products from the undeveloped sections of other states. The exhibit may also be taken to the Illinois state fair at Springfield.

Already settlers have given enthusiastic response to the request for exhibits and a spirit of hearty cooperation has been manifested that augurs well for the success of the display. Each settler's contribution will be tagged with his name and address and there will be no problems. It will be purely an educational exhibit. The state board will pay all expenses of transportation.

Provided for by Nature.
Moles and the mole cricket have the same problem to negotiate in cutting caves in the ground, so here an insect and an animal both have the same shaped forelegs and shovel-like hands and claws.

CENTRAL LEAGUE MAGNATE TO BECOME UMPIRE.
Dr. Harvey Parker, St. Louis, Mo.—Dr. Harvey Parker who still holds a franchise for the Grand Rapids team of the Central League has given up the "magnate" business to become an umpire succeeding Sheridan and filling the American League quota. He has arrived here and will start his work in a day or so.

TUBERCULOSIS HAS MADE COST OF MEAT HIGHER, IS THEORY

Dr. M. P. Ravenel, of University of Wisconsin, Makes Statement in Address At Portland, Oregon.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Portland, Ore., July 27.—That the high cost of living is primarily traceable, so far as the cost of meat is concerned, to having tuberculosis was the new theory advanced by Dr. M. P. Ravenel, of the department of bacteriology of the University of Wisconsin in his address before the State Medical Society here. Dr. Ravenel is an acknowledged authority on the subject of bovine tuberculosis.

Out of 35,000,000 hegs examined last year, said Dr. Ravenel, the government experts found 7,000,000 who were afflicted with the dread disease, tuberculosis, and were rejected by the government. Over three and a half billion dollars are lost annually through the rejection of tuberculous cattle.

Packers Don't Stand Loss.
"The packers don't stand this loss, you understand," continued Dr. Ravenel, "it is borne by the consumer, and by the farmer who raised the stock. The packer isn't going to run the risk of losing several million dollars worth of meat annually through the rejection of it, without seeing that he will be reimbursed. Undoubtedly, the severe testing of tuberculous animals before slaughter has a great deal to do with the increased cost of meats of all kinds."

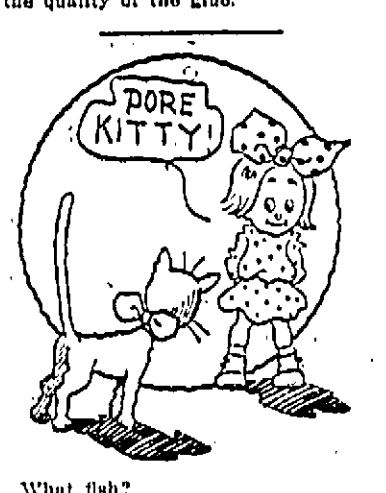

"I presume Wisconsin ships more high class cattle than any other state. Buyers from all over the world come here and pay on the average $10 a head more than the market price elsewhere so as to obtain cattle free from tuberculosis. Those attention and dairymen who fight the laws declaring that cattle and dairies must be kept clean and that milk must be pure, are in the same position as the anti-vaccinationists."

A Big Fight Ahead.
The opponents of the anti-tuberculosis laws are fighting hard, declared the speaker, and are working hard to bring about a return to old conditions. As an example he cited the case of Illinois, where present laws he declared are a fitting example of clever manipulation for the benefit of unclean dairymen. The commission reporting on the needs for dairy laws in that state, he went on to say, went so far as to quote Dr. Ravenel as saying that clean dairy and tests of milk are unnecessary. "On such tests," said Dr. Ravenel, "Jesus Christ could have been convicted and Judas Iscariot freed from blame."

Stricter Laws Needed.
In referring to the problems that confront those who are fighting bovine tuberculosis, Dr. Ravenel said the problem of locating tuberculous cattle need not be considered because of the enormous number of diseased cattle that are to be found anywhere. He declared he believed there should be a system of compulsory notification whenever a diseased animal was found and such animals as were suffering from open tuberculosis should be slaughtered.

That bovine tuberculosis was not hereditary, was also stated by Dr. Ravenel, who declared, however, that calves allowed to run with the cows afflicted with tuberculosis contracted the disease very soon, which has given rise to the general belief that the disease is hereditary.

Liquid Glue.
An excellent cold liquid glue is made as follows: Dilute 2 to 2½ parts crude nitric acid with 40 to 50 of water, soak in this 25 parts of glue for twenty-four hours and then heat the mixture until it is homogeneous. The quantity of acid used depends on the quality of the glue.

SEEKING WOMAN TO ARRANGE PROGRAM

State Board of Agriculture Wants Woman to Handle Woman's Day at State Fair.

Who is the woman that will direct the program for Woman's day during the state fair and where is she to be found?

This perplexing question, a special committee of the Wisconsin State Board of Agriculture, consisting of Charles H. Everett, Wisconsin Agriculturist, Rachel, and William McLaren of Ghahol Brothers, Milwaukee, are endeavoring to solve. Were either of the gentlemen called upon to select a woman to take charge of any department in their respective lines of business, there would be no hesitation. The selection would be made and a wise and competent one, too, it would be.

But—where is she—the stumbling block, but—

Rather than assume such responsibility, the committee has issued a call to the women of the state to select their leader. The committee wants a woman dear to the hearts of Wisconsin wives, mothers, sisters and daughters, a woman who is an executive and an organizer, a woman without a hobby other than woman's calling. Such a woman is wanted and the question is, will this county produce her?

She may be a club woman, a fraternal society woman, a suffragist, a factory, office or store worker, a woman of letters and science, a leader of music or literary circles, a home woman or a farmer's wife.

All that will be required of her will be that she assume charge of Woman's day and co-operate with the State Board of Agriculture in forming a program of events that will cover every phase of woman's work and woman's endeavor. She will be required to assist in selecting her assistants to conduct each department and in carrying out the program. She will have the aid of a corps of willing workers and the women of this county are requested to make suggestions to the Woman's day committee of the state fair, Room 71, Sentinel building, Milwaukee. Suggestions of names should be sent in immediately, as the list closes August 10, when a selection will be made and a woman leader for Woman's day announced.

Great Drawback.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

BUT somehow just now I only seem to be marking time. I don't like it. The man who said that to me is a young man of twenty-eight. He is an unusually successful young man. He has advanced rapidly in every way, but just now things don't seem to be moving as rapidly as he likes.

And he is restless and unhappy.

I do not think he has any right to be.

Into each life there must occasionally come these "marking time" years. Into each life there must come these seasons when one does not seem to be progressing as one should.

Perhaps it's a marking time year with you just now, my friends.

If it is, are you allowing restlessness and discontent to take possession of your heart? Are you chafing against delay and cheaply and foolishly trying to hurry conditions that cannot or should not be hurried?

Or are you remembering that the greatest successes always come to him who "learns to labor AND to wait"? It can't be always either seedtime or harvest. One cannot be always either sowing or reaping. One must sometimes be simply waiting for the great forces to work, the forces of nature and of life.

And one cannot hurry them in either life or nature. It doesn't hasten the harvest any to dig up the seeds to see if they are sprouting. Neither does it do any good to rebel against the "marking time" seasons in life.

But that does not mean that the waiting need be entirely passive. Not by any means.

Does the farmer go into his house and sit idle while he waits for the seeds to sprout? Doesn't he rather and quite content to keep him busy in keeping the conditions right for the seeds?

Try not to fret against the "marking time" seasons.

They must come into all lives. Try rather to possess your soul in peace and to put your energy into keeping conditions right for the growth that is going on as surely as it is silently and slowly.

John Ruskin has another and more beautiful simile for the same thought—He says:

"There is no music in a rest, but there is the making of music in it. In our whole life melody, the music is broken off here and there by 'rests,' and we foolishly think we have come to the end of time. God sends a tune of forced leisure—sickness, disappointed plans, frustrated efforts—and makes a sudden pause in the choral music of our lives, and we lament that our voices must be silent and our part missing in the music which ever goes up to the ear of the Creator. How does the musician read the rest? See him bent thus with unvarying count and catch up the next note true and steady as if no breaking place had come in between. Not without design does God write the music of our lives. But he it is to learn the time and not be dismayed at the 'rests.' They are not to be slurred over nor to be omitted, nor to destroy the melody nor to change the keynote. If we look up, God himself will beat time for us. With the eye on Him, we shall strike the next note full and clear."

MOTHER'S CORNER

By JULIA CHANDLER.

"All that I am, or ever hope to be, I owe to my Mother."
—Abraham Lincoln.

THE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY.

THE BUSY MAN came home for dinner in a happy mood. He found the Mother of his little James fagged out, and almost as fretful as he the baby himself.

"Such a warm, nice day," said the Busy Man. "Why not take the kid and do that shopping you have been wanting to do?"

The suggestion was ill advised. James was teething and the Little Mother's nerves were nearing the breaking point. She was weak in arm and with sleep and had not had a day-time hour away from the baby's fret for several moons. Besides, she remembered quite well her last shopping expedition, when James had fretted all the time; his go-cart had been in every one's way, and she had come home with a headache and feeling very much like a shrew. And so she evaded the Busy Man's suggestion.

"I'll take James out in the park. The air will do him good," she said.

The Busy Man was silent. He knew very well that the Little Mother needed to get away from the baby once in a while.

"I'll tell you," he exclaimed, enthusiastically, when he had thought the matter over. "I can take care of James as well as not this afternoon. I don't have to go back to the office. I had just as soon take care of two as one, so suppose you ask Marjory Meredith to go with you," he ended generously.

It was only the day before that he had overheard the Meredith Mother telling his wife that it was "not fair to shop with a baby."

Not fair to the mother since the baby attracted her attention from her buying and made her the limit of interest glances from other shoppers, who kept staring at her for a long period. Nor fair to the baby to keep it sitting in a stuffy store for a long period.

"Of course, I love Mildred with all my heart," the Meredith Mother had said, "but just the same, it would be better to leave her in safe hands while I get absolutely away from her once in a while."

And so the Little Mother accepted the Busy Man's offer, and the Meredith Mother, who lived next door, was glad to go also for a peaceful afternoon in the shops.

The Busy Man had the Meredith baby and his own in the sunny park when Mary Dowsore hove in sight.

"O," she exclaimed wonderingly, "what on earth are you doing?"

And the Busy Man told her.

"Why," he said, "if I could never get away from my work I would go crazy. You mothers are very faithful, but even faithfulness and love does not alter the cry of your nerves for a rest. Leave Jack with me and run along. If you hurry you can catch them," offered the Busy Man, appropriating the three-year-old son of the Dowsore Mother from across the way.

When the three mothers came home they found the Busy Man (never so busy as now) preparing to take the babies into the house. He had gotten on famously with the trio out in the Spring sunshine. And while they played he had evolved a plan.

"I have it," he told them. "You must form a Co-Operative Society. One afternoon out of each week each one of you mothers shall take care of all three babies, leaving the other two mothers to do just exactly whatever they please, whether it is going out, making visits, shopping or doing some long planned job at home, without interruption. For example, we will say that my wife takes care of all three children on every Tuesday afternoon. On Wednesday Mary Dowsore has the care of them, and on every Thursday they are all under the care of Mrs. Meredith. This will leave two whole afternoons of each week free for each of you to spend in whatever way you see fit, and I'm sure you need it," ended the Busy Man with a significant glance at the three babies, now grown restless.

The Mothers adopted the plan and it has worked famously. They know each other well and therefore feel no uneasiness concerning the babies on their "afternoons off."

The Co-Operative Society has been a good thing for the babies too, for their mothers come back to them rested and consequently more patient.

At least that is what the Busy Man says, and he ought to know!

WHAT DO YOU PLAN FOR ENTERTAINMENT DURING THE SUMMER?

The Present Gazette Contest Should Be of Interest To Every Hostess In Jansville.

It is not necessary that the articles entered in the present Gazette contest should consist of elaborate plans, which, if carried out, would involve a considerable outlay of time and money. Many of the simplest forms of entertaining guests in the summer months are the pleasantest and require very little money. The Gazette Editor suggests that in writing these articles the hostess should consider the expense of carrying out the plan, be taken into account so that the plans will be within the reach of the largest number of people possible.

As the time for handing in the articles is drawing to a close, it is important for those who have not begun to think of their plans to start at once. All articles must be in the Gazette office by August 1st, which leaves only a very short time. However, it is not too late for anyone who has not as yet thought of entering the contest, to think out and write an article. The Gazette Editor is anxious to have a large number of articles written for this contest as, in his estimation, it covers an important field. Although the number of prizes offered is limited, if there are other articles which merit them they will be published on the Woman's Page after the appearance of the prize articles, thus making way for a large number of ideas on this interesting problem.

If you have not started your article, begin it now.

First Prize—Caloric Fireless Cook-stove.

Second Prize—Set of 45 pieces of Flow Blue Dishes.

Third Prize—Vacuum Bottle.

Fourth Prize—Sampson Kitchen Scales.

In Cupid's Realm.

Inspecting Men's Halos.

A LONG with other institutions that are being dissected in this matter of effect age, men's halos are being taken off and critically inspected by womankind. She wants to find out just what constitutes this "glory of manhood" really signifies. Naturally, man doesn't like to have his halo inspected, nor does he like the discoveries she is making.

"You say you'll protect me from all the hard things of life," said a maiden cynically to an ardent wooer. "But just what does that mean? I notice that Mr. Jones always understates the butcher when he is dining for his bill, and lets Mrs. Jones pinhead him. And if Tom don't like the shirt he bought, he whistles Florence into exchanging it for him. And when the Browns are hard up, it is always poor Mrs. Brown who has to try to get a raise out of her relations. This protection business seems to me a grand bluff."

It's brutal, of course, to pick to pieces such a long-cherished ideal as man's protection of woman. But the modern woman is looking things squarely in the face. She doesn't want rosy dreams and beautiful illusions any longer. To her, truth is the most beautiful.

Barrie's play, "What Every Woman Knows," voices a truth long known to women. But she is not keeping it to herself any longer. She is beginning to see that it isn't doing the man, herself or the world any good to pretend that man is what he isn't. This sacred halo that has enshrined his brow so long must prove itself. If it is found to be only tinsel, and not the pure gold that has been believed, then it is high time the imposture is declared.

Women have pretty nearly demolished man's halo as a legislator. In the study and research consequent upon their demands for suffrage, they have discovered so many defects in his capacity as a voter that the halo that has crowned him as such has scarcely a glimmer of its onetime radiance. He has been partial, they say, to his own sex, he has been careless, he has been neglectful, he has been unprogressive. Away with any halo for man as a voter.

This halo demolishing is not altogether a bad thing, even though men do not exactly enjoy it. They have been so complacently putting their halos on for so many centuries, that they have ceased to look into their quality. They have inherited them, by reason of their being men, and so have accepted them as a matter of course. But now that women are snatching them off, and beginning to show where the gold has worn thin, or where they are badly tarnished men, no doubt, will for themselves look into the matter. They will probably cut the halo aside altogether and be the ordinary individual they are; or if they cling to the halo, because they think it becoming to their manly brows, they will polish it and have it generally repaired, so that it will really be what it purports to be.

So that after all this cold-blooded critical inspection of men's halos is not so disastrous a proceeding as it seems to those who believe in letting things be as they are. It will ultimately bring more truth into living. And wherever truth comes, comes sweetness and soundness.

A SUMMER HAT THAT SUGGESTS GRANDMOTHER'S TIME.

There is a quaintness about this picture hat which is suggestive of the mammoth bonnets of the forties, piled high with plumes and draped with the, then, extravagantly modish blonde lace veils. The arrangement of the wide lace bonneting on this leghorn model imitates a draped veil, though the lace is a very handsome piece of Irish Carrickmacross. A number of uncurled ostrich plumes sprout from the top of the crown and fall over the hat. This striking hat is well suited to a slender, young girl with an old-fashioned type of beauty.

ADJUSTABLE BAKING PAN

Bottom and Sides Separate and Letter Can Be Any Diameter.

In the adjustable baking pan devised by a Vermontian man there would seem to be a union that will find a welcome in every kitchen. Not only can this pan be made in different sizes, but there is no chance of cakes sticking to the sides and bottom. The bottom, indeed, is a separate shallow pan and the body portion is a circular strip of metal with a series of notches near one end and two tongues in the other end. One of these tongues engages a notch and makes the pan of any diameter desired and the other tongue prevents vertical movement of either end of the strip. As will readily be understood, all that need be done when a cake is baked is to lift the body portion of the vessel from the bottom pan and unhook the strip, which will then fly open, leaving the cake in perfect condition.

CLAIMS OF RAW FOOD ADVOCATES.

There was a time before the discovery of fire, when all food was eaten uncooked. And extreme advocates of naturalism hold that we are seriously in cooking our food today. The animals, they say, are perfectly healthy without cooks. There is, they insist, a peculiar vital force in the natural food which cooking destroys.

It is claimed that raw food cures diseases, especially digestive difficulties. Much credible testimony is offered in support of this claim, and at least two physicians in New York announce uncooked food as their principal therapeutic agency.

Can it be true that cooking is a mistake? The logical answer is, in the light of all facts, yes and no.

To the argument that cooking is unnatural, and therefore wrong, the reply is, that all the means of civilization are unnatural, artificial. Soap is unnatural. Electric light is unnatural. Steam heat is unnatural. Houses are unnatural. Only savagery is natural—and even the savage does not live altogether naturally, like the animals.

Cures Health and Happiness

to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, your Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and dragging pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house."

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls to build them up, regulate, and make them well. My eldest daughter has taken the Compound for painful, irregular periods, and it has always helped her."

"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for the Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies. I tell every one I meet that I owe my health and happiness to these wonderful medicines."—Mrs. J. G. Johnson, Scottville, Mich., R. F. D. 3.

When shown such positive and reliable proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound really does cure such cases wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering the same?

MORE GENUINE AND CONVINCING PROOF:

Elwood, Ind.—"I was sick three months and could not walk. I suffered all the time. I tried doctors, and they said I could not get well without an operation. I could hardly stand the pain, but my right side was the worse. I couldn't sleep at night, and I was troubled with a weakness."

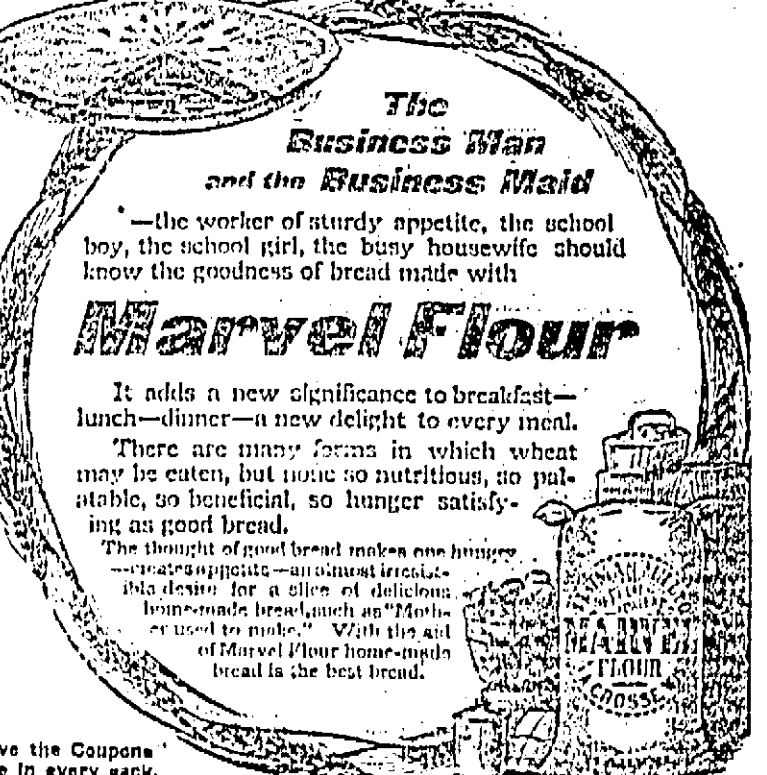

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me. I began to feel better when I had taken only one bottle, but I kept on until I was cured."—Mrs. Sallie Mullen, 2728 N. E. Street, Elwood, Ind.

What more proof can any one ask?

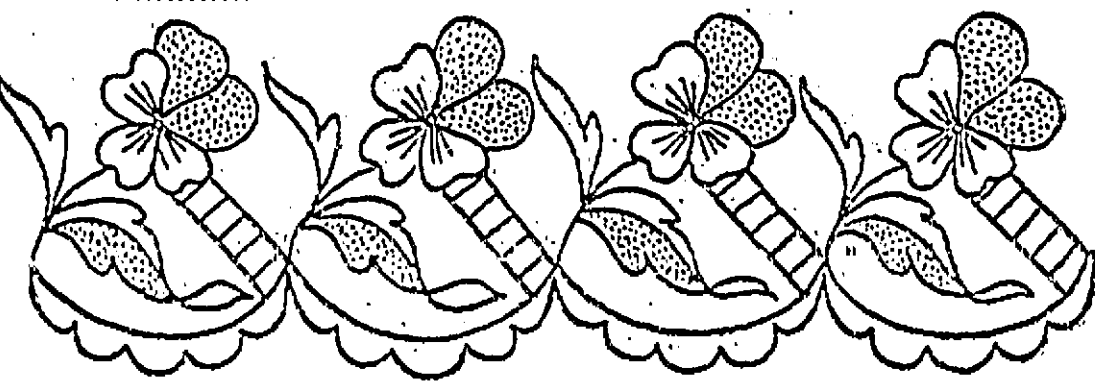

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1911, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

"He" beheld the mystery of the roller. Lidgerwood began to get glimpses of a deeper mystery involving Fleming and Hallock. Angela's friendship between the two men. One thing was certain—of all the minor officials in the railway service Hallock was the one who was best able to forward and to conceal Fleming's thiev-eries.

It was in the midst of the subterranean investigations that Lidgerwood had a call from the owner of the Wire Silver. On the Saturday in the week of aureous Fleming came in on the noon train from the west, and it was McCloskey who ushered him into the superintendent's office. Lidgerwood looked up and saw a small man wearing the kink of the engineers, with a soft felt hat to match. The snapping black eyes, with the straight brows almost meeting over the nose, and gleaming Goethe's Nephthoses, and Fleming shaved in fit the part, with curling mustaches and a dagger pointed Imperial.

"I've been trying to find time for a month or more to come up and get acquainted with you, Mr. Lidgerwood," the visitor began when Lidgerwood had waved him to a chair. "I hope you are not going to hold it against me that I haven't done it sooner."

Lidgerwood's smile was meant to be no more than decently hospitable.

"We are not standing much upon ceremony in these days of reorganization," he said. "Then, to hold the interview down truly to a business basis. What can I do for you, Mr. Fleming?"

"Nothing—nothing on top of earth. It's the other way round. I came to do something for you—or, rather, for one of your subordinates. Hallock tells me that the ghost of the old Mesa Building and Loan association still refuses to be laid, and he intimates that some of the survivors are trying to make it unpleasant for him by accusing him to you. As I understand it, the complaint of the survivors is based upon the fact that they think they ought to have had a cash dividend forthcoming on the closing up of the association's affairs."

"As Hallock has probably told you, I had the misfortune to be the president of the company. Perhaps it's only fair to say that it was a losing venture from the first for those of us who put the loaning capital into it. As you probably know, the money in these mutual benefit companies is made on lapses, but when the lapses come all in a bunch."

"I am not particularly interested in the general subject, Mr. Fleming," Lidgerwood cut in. "As the matter has been presented to me, I understand there was a cash balance shown on the books and that there was no cash in the treasury to make it good. Since Hallock was the treasurer I can scarcely do less than I have done. I am merely asking him and you to make some sort of explanation which will satisfy the losers."

"There is only one explanation to be made," said the ex-building and loan president bravely. "A few of us who were the officers of the company were the heaviest losers, and we felt that we were entitled to the scraps and leftovers."

"In other words, you looted the treasury among you," said Lidgerwood coldly. "Is that it, Mr. Fleming?"

The value owner laughed easily. "I'm not going to quarrel with you over the word," he returned. "Possibly the proceeding was a little informal if you measure it by some of the more highly civilized standards."

"I don't care to go into that," was Lidgerwood's comment, "but I cannot evade my responsibility for the one member of your official staff who is still on my payroll. How far was Hallock implicated?"

"He was not implicated at all save in a clerical way."

"You mean that he did not share in the distribution of the money?"

"He did not."

"Then it is only fair that you should set him straight with the others, Mr. Fleming."

The ex-president did not reply at once. He took time to roll a cigarette leisurely, to light it and to take one or two deep inhalations before he said: "It's a rather disagreeable thing to do, this digging into old graveyards, don't you think? As for those kickers, really I don't know what you can do with them unless you send them to me. And if you do that I am afraid some of them may come back on hospital stretchers. I haven't any time to fool with them at this late day."

Lidgerwood felt his gorge rising, and a great contempt for Fleming was mingled with a painful desire to pitch him out into the corridor. It was a concession to his unexplainable pity for Hallock that made him temperate.

"In justice to Hallock, I think you ought to make a statement of some kind that I can show to these men, who, very naturally, look to me for redress. Will you do that?"

"I'll think about it," returned the mild owner shortly, but Lidgerwood was not to be put off so easily.

"You must think of it to some good purpose," he insisted. "If you don't I shall be obliged to put my own construction upon your failure to do so and to act accordingly."

Fleming's smile showed his teeth.

"You're not threatening me, are you, Mr. Lidgerwood?"

"Oh, no; there is no occasion for threats. But if you don't make me that statement, fully expounding Hallock, I shall feel at liberty to make one of my own, embodying what you have just told me. And if I am compelled to do this you must not blame me if I am not able to place the matter in the most favorable light for you."

This time the visitor's smile was a mere baring of the teeth.

"Is it worth your while to make it a personal quarrel with me, Mr. Lidgerwood?" he asked, with a thinly veiled menace in his tone.

"I am not looking for quarrelsome occasions with you or with any one," was the placid rejoinder. "And I hope you are not going to force me to show you up. Is there anything else? If not I'm afraid I shall have to ask you to excuse me. This is one of my many busy days."

"After Fleming had gone Lidgerwood was almost sorry that he had not struck at once into the matter of the thiev-eries. But as yet he had no proof upon which to base an open accusation. One thing he did do, however, and that was to summon McCloskey and give instructions pointing to a bit of experimental observation with the mine owner as the subject.

"He can't get away from here before the evening train, and I should like to know where he goes and what he does with himself," was the form the instructions took. "When we find out who his accomplices are I shall have something more to say to him."

"I'll have him tagged," promised the trainmaster, and a few minutes later, when the Wire Silver visitor sauntered up Mesa avenue in quest of diversion whither to fill the hours of waiting for his train, a small man, red haired and with a mechanic's cap pulled down over his eyes, kept even step with him from dive to dive.

Judson's report made to the trainmaster that evening after the west-bound train had left was short and concise.

"He went up and sat in Sammy's game and didn't come out until it was time to make a break for his train. I saw him go into Sammy's, and I know he didn't stay in the barroom. I didn't see him talking to anybody after he left here." This was the wording of the report.

Thus Judson, who was still sober and who meant to be faithful according to his gifts. He was scarcely blameworthy for not knowing of the existence of a small back room in the rear of the gambling den or for the further knowledge of the fact that the man in search of diversion had passed on into this back room to join another after placing a few bets at the silent game, appearing no more until he had come out through the gambling room on his way to the train.

CHAPTER XI.

SEMI-CLERICAL.

ON the second day following Fleming's visit to Angela's Lidgerwood was called again to Red Butte to another conference with the mine owners. On his return, early in the afternoon, his special was slowed and stopped at a point a few miles east of the X spur at Silver Butte, and upon looking out he saw that Benson's bridge builders were once more at work on the wooden trestle spanning the Florida. Benson himself was in command, but he turned the placing of the string timbers over to his foreman and climbed to the platform of the superintendent's service car.

"I won't hold you more than a few minutes," he began, but the superintendent pointed to one of the camp chairs and sat down, saying: "There's no hurry. We have time orders against 73 at Timanyoni, and we would have to wait there anyhow. What do you know now—more than you knew the last time we talked?"

Benson shook his head. "Nothing that would do us any good in a jury trial," he admitted reluctantly. "We are not going to find out anything more until you send somebody up to Fleming's mine with a search warrant."

"Who am I to send, Jack? I have just come from Red Butte, and I took occasion to make a few inquiries. Fleming is evidently prepared at all points. From what I learned today I am inclined to believe that the sheriff of Timanyoni county would probably refuse to serve a warrant against him if we could find a magistrate who would issue one. New state of affairs, isn't it?"

"Beautiful," Benson agreed, adding: "But you don't want Fleming half as bad as you want the man who is working with him. Are you still trying to believe that it isn't Hallock?"

"I am still trying to be fair and just. McCloskey says that the two used to be friends—Hallock and Fleming. I don't believe they are now. Hallock didn't want to go to Fleming about that building and loan business, and I couldn't make out whether he was afraid or whether it was just a plain case of dislike."

"It would doubtless be Hallock's policy—and Fleming's, too, for that matter—to make you believe they are not friends. You'll have to admit they are together a great deal."

"I'll admit it if you say so, but I didn't know it before. How did you know it?"

"Hallock is over here every day or two. I have seen him three or four times since that day when he and Fleming were walking down the new spur together and turned back at night of me," said Benson. "Of course I don't know what other business Hallock may have over here, but one thing I do know—he has been across the river, digging into the inner consciousness of my old prospector. And that isn't all. After he had got the story of the timber stealing out of the old man he tried to bribe him not to tell it to any one else; tried the bribe first and a scare afterward—told him that something would happen to him if he didn't keep a still tongue in his head."

Lidgerwood shook his head slowly. "That looks pretty bad. Why should he want to silence the old man?"

"That's just what I've been asking myself. But right on the heels of that another little mystery developed. Hallock asked the old man if he would be willing to swear in court to the truth of his story. The old man said he would."

"Well," said Lidgerwood. "A night or two later the old prospector's shack burned down, and the next morning he found a notice pinned to a tree near one of his sluice boxes. It was a polite invitation for him to put distance between him and the Timanyoni district. I suppose you can put two and two together as I did."

Again Lidgerwood said: "It looks pretty bad for Hallock. No one but the thieves themselves could have any possible reason for driving the old man out of the country. Did he go?"

"Not much; he isn't built that way. That same day he went to work building him a new shack, and he swears that the next man who gets near enough to set it afire won't live to get away and brag about it. Two days afterward Hallock showed up again, and the old fellow ran him off with a gun."

"Keep in touch with your old man and tell him to count on us for protection," said Lidgerwood before leaving. Having an appointment with Leckhard, of the main line, timed for an early hour the following morning, Lidgerwood gave his conductor instructions to stop at Angela's only long enough to get orders for the eastern division.

When the division station was reached McCloskey met the service car in accordance with wire instructions sent from Timanyoni, bringing an armful of mail, which Lidgerwood purposed to work through on the run to Copah.

"Nothing new," Benson remarked when the trainmaster came aboard. "Nothing much, only the operators have notified me that there'll be trouble soon if we don't put Hannegan and Dickson back on the wire. The grievance committee intimated pretty broadly that they could swing the trainmen into line if they had to make a fight."

"We put no man back who has been discharged for cause," said the superintendent firmly. "Did you tell them that?"

"I did. I have been saying that so often that it might nearly say itself now when I hear my office door open."

"Well, there is nothing to do but to go on saying it. We shall either make a spoon or a horn. How would you be fixed in the event of a telegrapher's strike?"

"I've been figuring on that. It may seem like tempting the good Lord to say it, but I believe we could hold about half of the men."

"That is decidedly encouraging," said the man, who needed to find encouragement where he could. "Two weeks ago if you had said one in ten I should have thought you were over-estimating. We shall win out yet."

But now McCloskey was shaking his head dubiously. "I don't know. Andy Bradford has been giving me an idea of how the trainmen stand, and he says there is a good deal of strike talk. Williams adds a word about the shop force. He says that Griddle's men are not saying anything, but they'll be likely to go out in a body unless Griddle wakes up at the last minute and takes a club to them."

Lidgerwood's conductor was coming down the platform of the Crow's Nest with his orders in his hand, and McCloskey made ready to swing off. "I can reach you care of Mr. Leckhard, at Copah, I suppose?" he asked. (To be continued.)

MOROCCO IN INTERNATIONAL SPOTLIGHT.

Berlin.—The situation in Morocco becomes hourly more taxing to the world's diplomats. The sending of a gunboat to the Moroccan coast by Germany has created a furor in France and Russia. The situation needs the determination and clear-minded diplomacy of the late King Edward to bring about an amicable settlement. Just what the attitude of King George will be remains a question. He could undoubtedly do much if he wished to straighten out the whole affair.

Unwelcome Addition to Drink. A peculiar experience recently befell a tradesman at Murwillumbah, Australia. He is in the habit of leaving a jug of water in a shady spot all day to cool, drinking it at night. The other evening he was on the veranda talking to his wife, and reaching for the jug took a drink, and before he knew where he was a frog was half-way down his throat, eventually sliding right down.
